GLOBAL INTELLIGENCE

A woman in a traditional blue and red patterned Bedouin dress and headscarf stands in a rustic room with a large arched doorway, addressing a group of students. The room has a vaulted ceiling with wooden beams and a decorative hanging basket. The students are seated on the floor, listening attentively. A red arrow graphic points from the text 'of operating in a global world' towards the woman.

Rise to the challenge of operating in a global world

HBS students on the Israel Immersive Field Course (IFC) visit the Bedouin town of Lakiya in the northern region of Negev Desert. Their host was Abu Karen Amal, a pioneering woman in the Bedouin community who helped others transcend boundaries imposed by her community.

Field Global Immersion is a semester-long course that invites students to build on what they have been learning and apply it to real-world business problems. Students are paired with a Global Partner (GP) company with a product or service challenge for students to address. The course culminates in a one-week immersion with faculty at the company's location during which students meet with their GP and local consumers.

CASE

Method Experience

To get the most out of cases, students read and reflect on the case, and then meet in discussion groups before class to “warm up” and discuss their findings with other classmates. In class—under the questioning and guidance of the professor—students probe underlying issues, compare different alternatives, and finally, suggest courses of action in light of the organization’s objectives.

Place yourself in the role of the decision maker

Upon arrival at HBS, students are assigned to a specific “section”—a group of approximately 90 students with whom they will complete the Required Curriculum. The section’s rich mix of backgrounds, interests, experiences, and ambitions reflects the greater diversity of the class and much of the world as well.

Students quickly discover that the section experience gets them fully engaged during their first year at HBS and beyond, helping to forge lasting friendships and invaluable relationships for life.

through skillful faculty direction

Our high expectations demand exceptional commitment. For every hour of class time, an HBS faculty member dedicates many hours of preparation that includes individual case review, writing notes and lessons plans, and collaborative analysis among colleagues. Masterful teaching takes priority over every other obligation including research, writing, and administrative duties. Faculty dedication is motivated by its reward: an exciting, energized classroom that's thoughtfully choreographed, yet open to unexpected insights and understanding.
